Scott Phillips
AMAZING HORSE COUNTRY

Welcome to Amazing Horse Country!

Thank you for choosing to host an Amazing Horse Country workshop. I'm genuinely excited to work with you. Hosting is about creating a space where horses and people can learn in a way that feels good, honest, and connected.

My teaching isn't about steps, formulas, or controlling horses. It's about partnership — the kind that grows when a horse feels safe, understood, and supported. When riders learn to lead with clarity instead of pressure. When the environment encourages curiosity instead of tension.

By hosting, you're helping build that environment.

What We're Creating Together

Every workshop is a chance for riders to discover something powerful: that their horse is capable of far more willingness, softness, and try than they ever realized — and that they themselves are capable of leading in a way that brings that out.

We're not just teaching skills. We're building relationships.
We're giving horses a chance to feel good about what they're doing.
We're giving riders tools that make sense to them and most importantly - to the horse.We're building confidence that lasts long after the clinic ends.

Your facility becomes the place where those breakthroughs happen.

What You Can Expect From Me

You'll see a teaching style that is:

- Calm, clear, and horse-centric
- Focused on understanding the "why" versus steps and methods

- Supportive of every rider, regardless of experience
- Built around progressive learning — not pressure
- Designed to help horses feel safe, curious, engaged, balanced, and willing

I bring structure, obstacles, classroom learning, and a lot of experience helping horses and riders navigate challenges with clarity and positivity.

My goal is simple:

Every horse and rider partnership leaves feeling confident, capable and understood.

What I Appreciate About You as a Host

You're providing the space where people can grow.
You're welcoming horses who may be nervous, excited, green, or experienced.
You're creating a setting where riders feel comfortable enough to try new things.

You're helping build a community around good horsemanship.

That matters.

And I appreciate it.

The Experience You're Helping Shape

Workshops often feel like this:

- Riders arrive a little nervous, a little excited.
- Horses arrive curious, unsure, or ready to go.
- The first hour is full of discovery.
- By the second day, horses soften, riders breathe, and everything starts to click.
- By the end, people are smiling, horses are relaxed, and the whole group feels like they've shared something meaningful.

Hosts often tell me the energy is the best part — watching riders and horses transform right in front of them.

You're part of that transformation.

Looking Forward

I'm grateful you've chosen to partner with us.

If you ever have questions, ideas, or thoughts about how to make the experience even better, I'm always open to conversation.

Together, we’re creating something riders remember for years — and horses feel immediately.

Thank you for being part of it.

Scott Phillips

Amazing Horse Country Ltd.